

Peter Stiling

An already broad learning- and working back-ground in different cultures, a keen interest to learn and understand new things, or old ones even better, made me drift into the world of Pharmacy almost a decade ago. With Medical Anthropology and Ayurvedic Medicine, among others, at my base; I never expected to end up in Pharmaceutical Medicine, i.e. Pharmacovigilance, that I have been working in with great pleasure ever since.

Being asked for a short project at Johnson & Johnson Neuss in 2011, I made way into Germany, one project following the other.

A bigger project at Sandoz made me reside in the München area for almost 6 years and focus was turned towards the DACH- (Germany, Austria and Switzerland) region as a free-lancer, simultaneously while enforcing connections in and towards South-America and Asia.

Gradually I moved into more diplomatic functions, representing companies and products, giving trainings. Business development. Marketing- and Sales of Pharmacovigilance services (Outsourcing) among them.

As delegate for the dutch NMA to ICPM 2016 in São Paulo I got more involved with IFAPP and am part of its Communications Workgroup since.

The moving of the EMA (European Medicines Agency) to Amsterdam was one of the reasons to help me decide to move back to The Netherlands recently, from where I now work globally as a consultant.