

Shinichi Nishiuma

Dr Shinichi Nishiuma is currently working as Executive Director, Head of Medical Affairs, Celgene K.K. He graduated Kobe University School of medicine in Japan in 1997 and hold medical doctor license in Japan. He started his residency of internal medicine at Kobe city general hospital and followed by a staff in the department of Gastroenterology and Hepatology. In 2004, he joined Eli Lilly Japan as safety physician, covering various therapeutic areas. The he moved to clinical development group as clinical research physician, where he was responsible for Alzheimer's disease projects. Later he was back to safety group as lead physician and later he added his responsibility being head of surveillance group in Japan followed by responsible for all the activities as head of safety department in Lilly Japan. In 2017, he was appointed as the leader of newly created organization, Safety Medical and Epidemiology/Database research in R&D division. In July 2018, he joined Celgene K.K. Currently he is working as vice-chairperson of Japanese association of pharmaceutical medicine and was served as president for 2012 annual meeting.